

Follow the Money

To keep roadbuilding steady and predictable, Congress decides on contract authority and state allocations years in advance, then sets annual limits on how much can be obligated for projects. The system and the legislation are complex, as this chart from the Federal Highway Administration shows.

